

No One Sings Like That

(Verse 1)

I was searching through the static for a song to ease the pain
When a voice split through the silence like lightning in the rain
It was velvet, it was thunder, it was sorrow wrapped in flame
And I knew right then and there I'd never hear the same

(Chorus)

No one sings like that. Not now, not ever again
He gave us fire and tenderness. He made the lost feel like friends
So if the lights go dim tonight and the curtain starts to fall
We'll still hear him in the quiet in the echo of it all

(Verse 2)

He could bend a note to breaking, make the bitter sound like grace
Turn a heartbreak into heaven with the warmth behind his face
From desert winds to ocean tides, every stage became a shrine
And the echoes still remember what he gave us every time

(Chorus)

No one sings like that. Not now, not ever again
He gave us fire and tenderness. He made the lost feel like friends
So if the lights go dim tonight and the curtain starts to fall
We'll still hear him in the quiet in the echo of it all

(Bridge)

He's the voice we keep returning to, when words just won't suffice
A melody that holds us close, a soul that paid the price
And though the road grows heavy now, his song will never fade
It's carved into the silence that his magic voice once made

(Chorus)

No one sings like that. Not now, not ever again
He gave us fire and tenderness. He made the lost feel like friends
So if the lights go dim tonight and the curtain starts to fall
We'll still hear him in the quiet in the echo of it all
